

Had enough of the city? Need some fresh air? Fancy a spot of digging or donkey brushing? Feel like going green and meeting some like-minded people? At a loose end? Want to make a difference by improving your local environment? Or share your skills and learn new ones? Are you a teacher wanting to escape the classroom and find new, exciting ways to deliver the National Curriculum?

Look no further than your local city farm or community garden!

These handy green spaces have grown from within their local communities, and there are a lot to choose from! Each has its own distinctive flavour and appeal that reflects its local environment. This map is here to help you dig them out.

There's also a huge range of volunteering opportunities: get into gardening, composting or animal care - or help less able members of the community to enjoy these activities. Some farms and gardens run training courses with recognised qualifications as well.

So get digging!

Please note that many city farms are closed on Mondays. Always telephone before hand if you are planning a group visit. Entry is free unless otherwise stated. However, city farms and community gardens run on very tight budgets and donations are most appreciated.
