

You can save £570 a year on your household bills, cut your CO₂ emissions by 1.2 tonnes and get to know your neighbours better – all in the award-winning Transition Streets project.

Ask six neighbours and friends who live near you if they'd like to form a Transition Streets group, and we'll give you workbooks and a facilitator to get you started.

The first thing we did was to get water butts.

We go to each others houses to watch football.

We were pretty hopeless, the lot of us...

I bought a trolley so I don't use the car so much.

I've changed the way I do the washing.

Groups of friends and neighbours meet every few weeks with a practical workbook to make easy changes in how they use energy, water, food, packaging and transport

I hardly go to the supermarket now.

I can recycle too!

Swap your apple for my egg?

We just cried laughing a lot of the time.

I've seen how much easier it is to ask people for help.
